

RICHARD DIEBENKORN FOUNDATION

Archives Access Policy

The Richard Diebenkorn Foundation is committed to making its Archives available under equal terms of access for all users. The Foundation strives to maintain the standard professional policy on access adopted jointly by the Society of American Archivists and the American Library Association (ALA-SAA Joint Statement on Access: Guidelines for Access to Original and Research Materials, 1994.) Access to some materials may be restricted due to an agreement with the transferring party. The status of closed materials will be reviewed from time to time, with the ultimate goal of providing complete access.

All users are required to fill out the Reader Registration Form. Each request will be considered by the Foundation Archivist.

Written permission must be obtained by users from the Foundation before publishing reproductions of documents or substantial quotations therefrom. Permission is contingent upon the user agreeing to indemnify the Richard Diebenkorn Foundation for any loss, damage, or expense to third parties arising from such publication. The Richard Diebenkorn Foundation makes no representation that it is the owner of any copyright of the Archives materials made available for use. The user is responsible for determining the nature of any rights and the ownership or interest therein, obtaining permission to publish or use, and determining the nature of any possible liabilities that may result from publication or use.

In giving permission to reproduce archival materials, the Richard Diebenkorn Foundation does not surrender its own rights to publish such materials or to grant permission to others to publish them; nor does the Foundation assume any responsibility for infringement of copyright.
